NOEL AEBY

Noel Aebly lives in Sweden, a Swiss village – and has on 3 occasions received funding for Applied Arts grants from the Swiss government. He was nominated twice for Swiss photography awards and has obtained the Master Award from the International Perspectives Contest. His works have been published in several international press publications (the magazine L'Espresso) and in the Swiss magazine L'Espresso. Some of his most impressive work was published in the magazine L'Espresso and in the Swiss magazine L'Espresso. In addition a book about the City of Fribourg, which was published by the Swiss Museum of Art (2007) contains Aebly's pictures. His goal is to express situations and emotions in his photographs. He initially creates the pictures in his mind and then captures it. (Continued) (Opposite page)

He will not compromise on this approach. What he sees appears either in colour or in black and white. In the lab, he masters the art of matching what he saw in his mind with what he is looking to create. He feels totally at ease working with traditional silver halide images. When it comes to photographic equipment, Noel Aebly uses the traditional square-shaped Hasselblad that offers him the quality he needs."
